SUPERVISORS CLOSE SESSION WED.

The regular annual meeting of the board of supervisors was finished Wednesday of this week. All members were present and much work accomplished. Following compose the present board: M. A. Bates, chairman, Grayling; Charles Craven, Frederic; J. E. Kellogg, Lovells, J. A. Royce, South Branch; Hans Christensen, Beaver Creek and Jas. Knibbs, Maple Forest.

Together with the regular routine of auditing bills, making appropriations, checking up on the several officials and departments, a new member was appointed on the Board of Road Commissioners. Several applications for the position were on file, including one from Supervisor Knibbs of Maple Forest township. His appointment was confirmed but before doing so it was necessary for him to resign as supervisor, which he did. Mr. Knibbs succeeds John A. Holliday, whose term expired in January.

Another specially interesting fact is the receipt of $11,000 from the Michigan Central Railroad company as a fee for the filing of a trust mortgage in this county. This money the supervisors have placed in the highway fund for use in building the proposed "east and west" trunk line highway, running from Traverse City in the west to Harrisville in the east, connecting the county seat cities of Kalkaska, Grayling and Mio. This highway is not yet designated but efforts are being made to have the State Highway department do so.

Many miles of trunk line highways have been built in Crawford County; 7.12 per cent of the cost being paid by the tax payers of this county, but is not out that our tax payers have not paid a single cent toward this cost. Contracts taken by the County Road Commissioners have enabled this municipality to make profits which have been sufficient to pay our county's share in the construction.

This should sound good to the ears of property owners. Many miles of gravel trunk line highway, and M18 nearly completed from the north to the south end of the county and have not cost our tax payers one cent. This is a fact and if there are any "doubting Thomases" all they need to do to be convinced is to go to the records at the Court house and find out.

Conducted by Grayling Board of Trade.

MEET WITH THE BOARD OF TRADE MONDAY, OCT. 30th, 8 P. M.

The business men of Grayling are invited to attend a regular meeting of the Board of Trade, Monday, October 30th. This meeting it also open to all men who have the good of their community at heart.

At recent meetings the business men have not been very well represented. There is no reason for their staying away. They above all others should get out and enter the discussions and boost for the best interests of our community. This next meeting is just as important as any other and we will expect to see a large crowd. Next week's notes will contain the names of those present, or absent as the case may be. Will you be there? Or will you stay away?

Have you voluntarily joined the Board of Trade? The committee will call on you if you have not already become a member. You will be urged to join. In fact you may be pulled right in with the best bunch of live guys in town.

Let's see you out at the meeting Monday, October 30th.

DETROIT BOYS UNDER ARREST

BREAK INTO AND SHOOT UP COTTAGES ON NORTH BRANCH.

Two Detroit boys, Harold Schick and Edward Fitzsimmons, are under arrest here charged with burglary. Complaint was made by W. B. Mer-shon of Saginaw owner of a club house on the North Branch of the Au-Sable river, near Lovells. Both boys have confessed to the crime.

Several summer homes and club houses along the North Branch were broken into several days ago and much damage done as well as things stolen and officers had been hunting for the perpetrators. Schick and Fitzsimmons were arrested by game warden for hunting without licenses and shot to the jail in Grayling. They were found in the vicinity of the club houses and suspicious pointed to them as the thieves.

Among the places entered were the cottages of W. B. Mer-shon, Charles Kuehl and Paul Morley of Saginaw; C. W. Nash of Kenosha, Wisconsin.

Everything about the place was ransacked, drawers emptied and contents scattered about the places. Also the perpetrators did considerable shooting within the building using rifles, shot guns and revolvers. Some of the doors were riddled with shots, and much damage done to the property in general.

The young men are 17 and 18 years old respectively. One other party that was in the gang escaped and it is supposed that he is in Detroit. Officers have his description and are after him. He is said to have been the ring-leader.

Milk.

As winter draws near thoughtful people will look for a place to secure a liberal supply of milk for themselves and for their children.

People who skimp on milk are too often liberal in purchase of cigars and attendance at the movies.

The price of a good cigar will buy a quart of milk which is the amount a school child should have every day. Helen Winslow has prepared the following list of good things to be said for milk:

1. Pellagra is caused by a diet deficient in certain elements. Milk added to such a diet cures this tropical disease.

2. Beriberi is a disease of the nerves similar to pellagra. Milk cures it.

3. Inflammatory rheumatism has been cured by an entire milk diet. The milk washes away the poisons causing this ailment.

4. Milk cures sore eyes when same is caused by a deficient diet.

5. Milk adds actual inches to a man's stature. Japanese coolies were experimented upon and after being fed much milk, several inches were added to their height.

6. Milk plus fresh air and sunshine cures tuberculosis.

7. A milk diet exclusively will greatly reduce flesh.

8. A milk diet exclusively will add good solid flesh to a thin person.

9. Milk was one of the main foods upon which Jack Dempsey trained for his winning battle. It makes dependable brawn and muscle.

10. Milk is recognized as the greatest "protective food" known to man. The milk-eating man or woman has a resistance to disease not possessed by non-milk eaters.

11. The midshipmen at Annapolis are required to consume at least one quart of pure milk per day. No "sick days" are common here since milk has become the conditioner.

12. The Chinese, Japanese, and similar races who have never known the dairy cow are undersized and lack initiative and "pep." World leaders are invariably the milk-fed nations.

13. Miss Florence Busse of Iowa State College has divided milk into the following: For muscle, milk and cheese; for bones, milk, cottage cheese and cream; for energy, butter and cream; for body regulator, butterfat; for growth, milk, butter.

14. Milk prevents scurvy or cures it.

15. School children who are regular milk users complete the grades two years ahead of non-milk users, according to an experiment on 55,000 children in Los Angeles.

16. In all athletic competitions milk drinkers invariably win over non-milk drinkers.

17. Milk makes well developed tissues, smooth hair, bright eyes, and healthy color.

18. The line in milk builds strong bones.

19. The vitamins in milk insure normal growth.

20. Children who do without milk are apt to be nervous, irritable, have indigestion, are restless at night, and take cold easily.

21. The old cow is the standard manufacturer of our all-important vitamins.

22. Stunted children or stunted men "come back" on a diet of milk.

23. Milk is beneficial in the treatment of boils, pimples, gastro-intestinal derangements, diseases of the respiratory passages, and as a preventive of bubonic plague. Its vitamins are the reason.

24. Milk prevents or cures rickets.

25. Arctic explorers and sailors on long cruises who have run out of dairy foods and green stuff actually die of starvation, though other foods are to be had.

26. Mothers would not make much headway in feeding their babies and children large quantities of liver, kidneys, egg yolks, and carrots. In milk we have the vitamin source as Nature intended it.

27. The best baker's bread to be bought today is now made with milk instead of water. This costs bakers thousands of dollars more a year, but it pays because the bread is tastier (Continued to last page.)

TO THE VOTERS OF CRAWFORD COUNTY

WOMEN AS WELL AS MEN.

It is your duty to get out and vote for sheriff at the coming election, the first Tuesday in November.

We have reason to believe that you will give reasonable time and thought to making the best selection for the sheriff's office. In so doing you will weigh the candidate's character, his willingness to attend the duties of the office of sheriff. This is no easy man's job if these duties are to be properly administered. It takes a man with ability to stop violators of the law, whose nerve is of the quality that makes a good officer. We have reasons to believe, regardless of party politics, that is the only feasible candidate for the office of sheriff and should be elected on Nov. 7th. Every voter should make it their business to cast a vote for PETER F. JORGENSEN.

Mr. Jorgenson has been a resident of Crawford county 36 years, and has been a tax payer for thirty-two years. He has served as highway commissioner for seven terms, under seven different boards and each have had the highest praise for his work. Mr. Jorgenson is honorable and efficient in the performance of his duties as an officer, always looking to the interest of his COUNTY, in a just and upright manner. His work will stand the test of honor. Mr. Peter F. Jorgenson has not made any state senate which he does not intend to fulfill. He is of that sturdy type which will cause violators of the law to have a great deal of respect for him as sheriff. We know that Mr. Jorgenson will clean up the violations and maintain a greater respect for the law than there has been in the past few years. We do not believe that any opponent of Mr. Jorgenson has these sturdy qualities of character and ability to perform the duties of sheriff.

CAST YOUR VOTE FOR PETER F. JORGENSEN, FOR SHERIFF.

His $500 pledge was applied to a fund of $413,000 raised on the university campus within thirty hours.

TEN-FOOT RAINFALL

A freak rainfall covering a spot about ten feet square, which continued to fall in Alexandria, Va., for several days, is puzzling scientists. While the weather bureau declares that Alexandria's freak rain is a physical impossibility, the fact remains that in front of 417 South Washington street and nowhere else, it was raining for days. Hundreds of curious persons flocked to the scene, skeptical, but were converted before leaving. The gentle rainfall was a reality without doubt.

WARNS HOUSEWIVES

For the careless housewife who often causes some mishap around the home, leaving a hot iron on the ironing board and causing a fire, pouring kerosene on the stove, etc., Mrs. Lawrence Vail Coleman, chairman of the home society committee of the Safety Institute of America, who is in charge of a study of the accident hazards of the home and of means of their prevention, has issued a list of "Don'ts" for the housewife. Mrs. Coleman has made a careful study of the suggestions and aims for the household to prevent accidents, and hopes that every housewife will observe them.

Peacock's Coloring.

The brilliant colors of the tail-feathers of the peacock, and the appurtenant self-luminous reds in the throat feathers of the humming bird, are not due to pigments, according to scientists. When one looks through a peacock's feathers one sees only a brown, due to the so-called melanin pigment. In all the iridescent feathers the barboles are flattened plates of brown, which therefore give the colors of this film. The structure is so marked that an expert can pick out the iridescent feathers in the dark by the feel.

Was Mythical Monarch

Prester John was the title given to an imaginary Christian sovereign, who, according to medieval tradition, ruled over an extensive empire in the interior of Asia during the twelfth century. This myth is supposed to have originated in the stories of the Nestorian missionaries, who, in the eleventh and twelfth centuries, penetrated into eastern Asia and converted to Christianity one Oong, a khan of Tar-tary. In 1177 Pope Alexander III dispatched an envoy to Prester John, but the ambassador never returned; and in 1245 Louis IX of France sent Bon-raguas, a French friar, to search for him, but the journey proved fruitless. In later years tradition transferred Prester John to Abyssinia, where he continued his mythical existence as king of that country.

DOES LAUNDRY WORK AND HOUSEWORK TOO

Surprised to Find Himself Feeling So Well

Taunton, Mass. — "I used to have pains in my back and legs so badly, with other troubles that women sometimes have, that my doctor ordered me to stay in bed a week in every month. It didn't do me much good, so one day after talking with a friend who took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for about the same troubles I had, I thought I would try it also. I find that I can work in the laundry all through the time and do my housework, too. Last month I was so surprised at myself to be up and around and feeling so good while before I used to feel completely lifeless. I have told some of the girls who work with me and have such troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I tell them how it has helped me. You can see my testimonial for the good of others." Mrs. BLANCHES SILVER, 59 Grant St., Taunton, Mass.

INTELLIGENT VOTING.

In a few weeks now the country must go to the polls and choose another set of federal lawmakers, as well as an army of state officials. The progress and prosperity of the land depends much upon the decisions made in the secrecy of the polling booth on November 7.

Many people who speak contemptuously of politicians and government, who groan about high taxes and legislative inaction, yet do practically nothing to improve these conditions under which they fret. Not merely do they take no part in political or organization, but they won't bother to read carefully the news of political developments, study of which will enable them to act intelligently in selecting public officials.

Many newspaper men used to testify that their readers took so little interest in the proceedings of Congress and their state legislature, that they found it necessary to cut reports of these bodies down to very small space. Then these people who would not read the political news, would find fault when the candidates for whom they voted proved inefficient and incompetent.

People often decide how to cast their ballots by the current talk on the streets. Some vote for a candidate because his picture makes him look like a capable fellow. Others are won over by ardent handshakers, and think that a genial manner and the appearance of good fellowship are more important than business ability and breadth of mind and experience. Then these folks complain because our lawmakers are not able to remove all the evils from which the country may suffer.
The country will have good government when all the people form the habit of attentive reading of good newspapers and magazines, so that they understand the merits of big questions and are well informed about the records of the various aspirants.
The Crawford AVALANCHE for one,
promises to do its full share to spread the information and the sound ideas that are the basis for intelligent voting.

THE IDEAL PURGATIVE.

As a purgative, Chamberlain's Tablets are the exact thing required.
Strong enough for the most robust, mild enough for children. They cause an agreeable movement of the bowels without any of that terrible gripping. They are easy and pleasant to take and agreeable in effect.

Oliver B. Scott
Republican Candidate
for County Clerk

Is well qualified and courteous and if elected will always be on the job.

Will appreciate your Vote.

Election, Tues. Nov. 7.

OLIVER B. SCOTT has been a resident of Crawford county since 1878, and has been a tax payer 23 years. He is an enterprising citizen and does his work thoroughly, as is proven by his records as Township Clerk, Postmaster, and Supervisor of South Branch Township.

He has always been one of the leading and progressive citizens of his community and believes in working for the upbuilding of the commonwealth in which he lives.

He will make a first-class County Clerk, if elected, and those voting for him need never have to make excuses for having done so.

He believes that a person in public office should give first attention to the duties of such office in preference to his personal matters, and always be on the job for the accommodation of those wishing to do business.

that your confidence in me has not been misplaced, and shall give my best efforts toward doing my full duty every day in conducting the affairs of the office.

Sincerely yours,
JESS BOBENMOYER.

HOW BETTER THAN PILLS?

The question has been asked in what way are Chamberlain's Tablets superior to the ordinary cathartic and liver pills? Our answer is: they are easier and more pleasant to take and their effect is so gentle that one hardly realizes that it is produced by a medicine. Then, they not only move the bowels but improves the appetite and strengthen the digestion.

Lifting the Burden From the Back of the Average Taxpayer

The present Republican Congress enacted a new tax law reducing federal taxes approximately $820,000,000 a year. It is being charged that this law does not benefit the average taxpayer.

Every man earning $5,000 a year or less knows this Republican tax law allows him $500 more exemption; if he has dependents it doubles the exemption allowance for them. This saves the heads of "average families" $100,000,000 a year.

Every woman knows that under this Republican tax law she and her family no longer pay 10 per cent. tax on all kinds of wearing apparel, perfume, cosmetics, medicinal preparations, and such toilet articles as tooth paste and soap. These reductions save the "average taxpayer"
$35,000,000 a year.

Every child knows that under this Republican tax law there is no longer a tax at the soda fountain, or for ice cream or candy;
or footballs, baseballs, fishing tackle, and other sporting goods. These reductions save the "average taxpayer" $39,

000,000 a year.

Every family knows the taxes
on goods shipped by freight, express or parcel post were added to the retail price. The Republican tax law repealed those taxes, saving the average taxpayer $1,000,000 a year. The taxes on railroad tickets, saving
the average taxpayer $250,000
a year; on lodge dues and insurance premiums, saving the average taxpayer $20,000,000 a year; phonographs, pianos and other musical instruments, saving the average taxpayer $12, 000,000 a year,—were all repealed.

Out of $820,000,000 reduction in taxes, the average taxpayer participated in $682,000,000 of the savings.

Co-operation between the Republican executive departments and the Republican Congress in reducing public expenses and appropriations made this reduction of taxes to the average taxpayer possible. If the burden upon the back of the average taxpayer is to be still further lightened it is necessary to elect a Republican Congress in order to carry on the program of public economy.

The Junction cases of the St. Helen Shooting Club vs. Louis G. Paine, Harold Paine, Joe Ferguson, William Gage and Simeon Poole, residents of St. Helen were disposed of at the regular session of Circuit court held in Roscommon last week, and a judgment rendered in favor of the plaintiff whereby permanent injunctions were made against the defendants prohibiting them from hunting on Lake St. Helen. The case was heard on the ground around the lake for the purpose of using it as a duck hunting ground for its members, and as wild rice grew in the marshes there it became a natural feeding ground for ducks. Residents in and about St. Helen and also West Branch sportsmen believed that the club had no legal right to prevent others than members to hunt on the lake and the five above residents continued to hunt there until the club had an injunction served on them by the court. Attorney Hiram R. Smith of Roscommon represented the plaintiff and Attorney Harris E. Chapin of West Branch represented the defendants. This case which has been pending for some time has been decided with much interest in this section.

SYNOPSIS—At Thornton Fairchild's death his son Robert learns there has been a dark period in his father's life which for almost thirty years has caused him suffering. The secret is hidden in a document left by the father, which also informs Robert he is now owner of a mining claim in Colorado, and advising him to see Henry Barnham, a lawyer. Barnham tells Robert his claim, a silver mine, is at Ohadi, thirty-eight miles from Denver. He also warns him against a certain man, "Squint" Rodaine, his father's enemy. On the road to Ohadi from Denver Fairchild assists a girl, apparently in a frenzy of hate, to change a tire on her auto. When she has left, the sheriff and a posse appear, in pursuit of a bandit. Fairchild bewildered, the girl had taken. At Ohadi Fairchild is warmly greeted by "Mother" Howard, boarding-house keeper, for his father's sake. From Mother Howard, Fairchild learns something of the mystery connected with the disappearance of "Sister" Larsen, his father's co-worker in the mine. He meets the girl he had assisted, but she denies her identity. She is Anita Richmond, Judge Richmond's daughter. Visiting his claim Fairchild is shadowed by a man he recognizes from descriptions as "Squint" Rodaine. Back in Ohadi, his father's old friend, Harry Harkins, a Cornishman, summoned from England by letter to help Fairchild, tells him with joy, The fair find the mine flooded and have no sufficient funds to have it pumped dry. Later in the day "Squint" Rodaine announces that he practically saw Harkins fall into the flooded mine, and evidently is drowned. Harkins being a general favorite, the entire population turns out to clear the flooded mine. When the work is practically done, Harry appears, apparently surprised at the turn of events. He had been a shrewd talker, but now he is silent. He pumped out without cost, to himself or Fairchild, and the men take it as a good joke. Fairchild learns that Judge Richmond is dying, and that he and Anita are in the power of the Rodaines. They begin, as partners, to work the mine. In their hearts both fear the mine was killed by Thornton Fairchild, and his body buried by a cave-in which destroyed the mine. At the "old times" Fairchild dances with Anita, to the delight of the Mayor, Rodaine, son of "Squint," supposed to be engaged to the girl. A bandit jumps out the mine and shoots a miner. Maurice Rodaine, "Squint's" son, is arrested. Fairchild intervenes to save Anita from the bullying of the two Rodaines, and is mystified at Anita's apparent ingratitude. Fairchild puts up the claim as bond, and secures Harry's release from jail. They are offered $50,000 for the claim by an unknown party, but agree to disregard it. Clearing the mine, they come to where they fear to find Larsen's remains. A skeleton in a miner's costume, which Harkins identified as Larsen, is there, and there seems little doubt that Thornton Fairchild was a murderer. Fairchild informs the coroner of the discovery of the skeleton. At the inquest "Crazy Laura," (last wife of "Squint" Rodaine, and an acknowledged imbecile, gives damaging testimony against Thornton Fairchild. The jury returns a verdict that Larsen came to his death at Thornton Fairchild's hands. Anita's engagement to Maurice Rodaine is announced. Fairchild is summoned to Denver to receive "important information" about his mine.

"I was hoping that I had more than that."

"Ah, perhaps so. But I speak only from what I know. There is one person who is very anxious about your welfare."

"So?"

"Well, isn't there?"

Fairchild squared away from the table.

"Mr. Barnham," came coldly, the inherent distrust for the greasy, uninviting individual having seeped to the surface. "You wired me that you had some very important news for me. Now that I'm here, your mission seems to be wholly taken up in drawing from me any information that I happen to possess about myself. Plainly and frankly, I don't like it, and I don't like you, and unless you can produce a great deal more than you have already, I'll have to chalk up the expense to a place of bad judgment and go on about my business."

He started to rise, and Barnham scrambled to his feet.

"Please don't," he begged, thrusting forth a fat hand, "please, please don't. This is a very important matter. One—one has to be careful in going about a thing as important as this. The person is in a very peculiar position."

"But I'm tired of the way you beat around the bush. As I told you before, I don't like it—and I'm just about at the point where I don't care what information you have!"

"But just be patient a moment—I'm coming to it. Suppose—" then he cupped his hands and stared hard at the ceiling. "Suppose that I told you that there was some one who was willing to see you through all your troubles, who had arranged everything for you, and all you had to do would be to say the word to find yourself in the midst of comfort and riches?"

Fairchild blinked in surprise at this and sank back into his chair. Evidently he laughed uneasily and puffed again at the dubious cigar.

"I say," came slowly, "that there isn't any such animal!"

"But there is," she said. "Then he says so, as though to cover the slip. Fairchild leaned forward."

"Suppose," came the apprehensive voice, "suppose that the person who has arranged everything for you is a man who has arranged everything for you, and all you had to do would be to say the word to find yourself in the midst of comfort and riches?"

me. But truly," and he beamed, "you are such a tough customer to deal with, and so suspicious—no offense meant, of course—that I really was forced to it. I—feel sure she will forgive me."

"Whom do you mean by 'she'?"

Mr. Barnham smiled in a knowing manner.

"You and I both know," came his cryptic answer. "She is your one great, good friend. She thinks a great deal of you, and you have done several things to cause that admiration. Now, Mr. Fairchild, coming to the point, suppose she should point a way out of your troubles? In the first place, you and your partner are in very great difficulties."

"Are we?" Fairchild said it sarcastically.

"Indeed you are, and there is no need of attempting to conceal the fact. Your friend, whose name must remain a secret, does not love you—don't ever think that—but—"

Then he hesitated as though to watch the effect on Fairchild's face. There was none; Robert had masked it. In the words went on: "But she does think enough of you to want to make you happy. She has recently done a thing which gives her a great deal of power in one direction. In another, she has connections who possess vast money-powers and who are looking for an opening here in the West. Now—" he made a church steeple out of his fingers and leaned back in his chair, staring vaguely at the ceiling. "If you will say the word and do a thing which will relieve her of a great deal of embarrassment, I am sure that she can so arrange things that life will be very easy for you henceforth."

"I'm becoming interested."

"In the first place, she is engaged to be married to a very fine young man. You, of course, may say differently, and I do not know—I am only taking her word for it. But—if I understand it, your presence in Ohadi has caused a few disagreements between them—and well, you know how willful and headstrong girls will be. I believe she has committed a few—er—indiscretions with you."

"That's a lie!" Fairchild's temper got away from him and his fist banged on the table. "That's a lie—and you know it!"

"Pardon me—er—pardon me! I made use of a word that can have many meanings, and I am sure that in using it, I didn't place the same construction that you did in hearing it. But let that pass. I apologize. What I should have said was that, if you will pardon me, she used you, as young women will do, as a foil against her fiance in a time of petty quarreling between them. Is that plainer?"

It was too plain to Fairchild. It hurt. But he nodded his head and the other man went on.

"Now the thing has progressed to a place where you may be well—what one might call the thorn in the side of their happiness. You are the 'other man,' as it were, to cause quarrels and that sort of thing. And she feels that she has not done rightly by you, and, through her friendship and a desire to see peace all around, believes she can arrange matters to suit all concerned. To be plain and blunt, Mr. Fairchild, you are not in an enviable position. I said that I had information for you, and I'm going to give it. You are trying to work a mine. That demands capital. You haven't got it and there is no way for you to procure it. Your partner now is accused of four crimes and will go to trial on them in the fall. It is almost certain that he will be convicted on at least one of the charges. That would mean that the funds in the mine must remain in jurisdiction of the court in lieu of a cash bond while the case goes to the Supreme court. Otherwise, you must yield over your partner to go to jail. In either event, the result would not be satisfactory. For yourself, I dare say that a person whose father is supposed to have committed a murder—not that I say he did it, understand—hardly could establish sufficient standing to borrow the money to proceed on an undertaking which requires capital. Therefore, I should say that you were in somewhat of a predicament. Now—" a long wait and then, "please take this as only coming from a spokesman. My client is in a position to use her good offices to change the viewpoint of the man who is the chief witness against your partner. She also is in a position to use those same good offices in another direction, so that there might never be a grand jury investigation of the finding of a certain body or skeleton, or something of the kind, in your mine—which, if you will remember, brought about a very disagreeable situation. And through her very good connections in another way, she is able to relieve you of all your financial embarrassment and procure for you from a certain Eastern syndicate, the members of which I am not at liberty to name, an offer of $200,000 for your mine. All that is necessary for you to do is to say the word."

Fairchild leaned forward.

"And of course," he said caustically, "the name of this mysterious feminine friend must be a secret?"

"Certainly. No mention of this transaction must be made to her directly, or indirectly. Those are my specific instructions."

"Do you want my answer now?"

"At any time when you have given the matter sufficient thought."

"That's been accomplished already. And there's no need of waiting. I want to thank you exceedingly for your offer, and to tell you—that you can go straight to—"

And without looking back to see the result of his utterance, Fairchild rose, turned to the door, unlocked it, and stepped out into the hall. He had taken snap judgment, but in his heart, he felt that he was right. What was more, he was as sure as he was sure of life itself that Anita Richmond had not arranged the interview and did not even know of it. One streak of name was fitting through Fairchild's brain and causing it to seethe with anger. Cleverly concealed though the plan might have been, nicely arranged and carefully planned, to Robert Fairchild it all stood out plainly and clearly—the Rodaines!

And yet why? That little word halted Fairchild as he left the elevator. Why? What did they know about the Blue Poppy mine, when neither he nor Harry had any idea of what the future might hold for them there? That day in court Rodaine had said that the Blue Poppy mine was a good property and that it was worth every cent of the value which had been placed on it. How did he know? And why?

Suppose that it had been Anita Richmond after all who had arranged this? It was logical in a way. Maurice Rodaine was the one man who could give direct evidence against Harry as the man who had held up the Old Times mine, and Anita now was engaged to marry him. Judge Richmond had been a friend of Thornton Fairchild; could it have been possible that this friendship might have entailed the telling of secrets which had not been related to anyone else? The matter of the finding of the skeleton could be handled easily. Fairchild saw, through Maurice Rodaine, one word from him to his father could change the story of Crazy Laura and make it, on the second telling, only the mummified tale of an insane, herb-gathering woman. Anita could have arranged it, and Anita might have arranged it. Yet, why should she have gone through this procedure to reach him? Why had she not gone to Fairchild with the proposition—to a man whom she knew—Fairchild trusted, instead of to a greasy, hand-rubbing shyster? And besides—

But the question was past answer now. Fairchild had made his decision, and he had told the lawyer where to go. But one thing was certain: the Blue Poppy mine was worth money. Once before an offer had come, and now that he thought of it, Fairchild felt almost certain that it had been from the same source. That was for fifty thousand dollars. Why should the value have now jumped to four times its original figures? It was more than the adventurer could encompass; he sought to dismiss it all, went to a picture show, then trudged back to his hotel and to sleep.

The next day found him still striving to put the problem away from him as he went about the various errands outlined by Harry. A day after that, then the puffing, sporting, narrow-gauged train took him again through Clear Creek canon and back to Ohadi. The station was strangely deserted.

Had it been any one else, Fairchild would have shouted for happiness and joined the parade. As it was, he stood far to one side, a silent, grim figure, watching the miners and townspeople passing before him, leaping about in their happiness, calling to him the news that he did not want to hear.

The Silver Queen had "hit." The faith of Squint Rodaine, maintained through the years, had shown his perspicacity. It was there; he always had said it was there, and now the strike had been made at last, lead-silver-ore, running as high as two hundred dollars a ton. It meant everything for Ohadi; it meant that mining would boom now, that soon the hills would be clustered with prospectors, and that the little town would blossom as a result of possessing one of the rich silver mines of the state.

Fairchild felt cheap. He felt defeated. He felt small and mean and to be able to join the celebration, Squint and Maurice Rodaine possessed the Silver Queen; that they, of all persons, should be the fortunate ones was bitter and hard to accept. Why should they, of every one in Ohadi, be the lucky men to find a silver bonanza, that they might flaunt it before him, that they might increase their standing in the community, that they might raise themselves to a pedestal in the eyes of every one and thereby rally about them the whole town in any difficulty which might arise in the future? It hurt Fairchild. It sickened him. He saw now that his enemies were more powerful than ever. And for a moment he almost wished that he had yielded down there in Denver, that he had not given the ultimatum to the greasy Barnham, that he had accepted the offer made him—and gone on, out of the fight forever.

Anita! What would it mean to her? Already engaged, already having given her answer to Maurice Rodaine, this now would be an added incentive for her to follow her promise. It would mean a possibility of further argument with her father, already too weak from illness to find the means of evading the insidious pleas of the two men who had taken his money and made him virtually their slave. The future looked black for Robert Fairchild. Slowly he walked past the happy, shouting crowd and turned up Kentucky gulch toward the ill-fated Blue Poppy.

The tunnel opening looked more forlorn than ever when he sighted it, a bleak, staring, single eye which seemed to brood over its own misfortunes, a dead, hopeless thing which never had brought anything but disappointment. A choking came into Fairchild's throat. He entered the tunnel slowly, ploddingly; with lagging muscles he hauled up the bucket which told of Harry's presence below, then slowly lowered himself into the recesses of the shaft and to the drift leading to the stope, where only a few Barnham.

Only the bawling bus man for the hotel, the station agent wrestling with a trunk or two—that was all. Fairchild looked about him in surprise, then approached the agent.

"What's happened?"

"A lot. From what I hear it's a strike that's going to put Ohadi on the map again."

"Who made it?"

"Don't know. Some fellow came

GOT IDEA FOR CASH REGISTER

Original Maker of Machines Copied Devices From Automatic Indicator Used on Ocean Vessels.

The invention of the cash register was due to one of those happy accidents of which only the alert mind takes advantage. A business man of Dayton, Ohio, named Jacob Ritty, had a store in a good location in that city, and it attracted many customers, yet somehow it was not profitable. He worried so much about his lack of success that a vacation became necessary, and he decided to take a trip to Europe. While on the voyage, Mr. Ritty one day visited the ship's engine room. His attention was caught by the automatic indicator, which recorded the revolutions of the propeller shaft. The idea occurred to him: Why not devise a machine to record the sales in a store? Hence the cash register.

At the time of his inspection Jacob Ritty owned a retail shop in a small winter town near Dayton. He tried one of the machines then of a rather crude type—and was so pleased with the results that he realized the opportunities they offered. He bought out the company that was making them, and became its president.

Shoulders Not Alike.

To the majority of persons the statement that their shoulders are not of the same height will come as a surprise, but tailors know that almost invariably the left shoulder is higher than the right. If a baby's shoulders are measured it will be found that they are exactly even. That they do not remain so is blamed upon parents, who as a rule lead their young and growing children by the left hand. This is a natural manner of leading the child, as it shields it from bumps or persons met in its walks, but the muscles and bones are thus continually raised and in the end become permanently out of position, although the change is so slight that it is not noticeable unless accurate measurements are taken.

days before they had found that gaunt, whitened, haunting thing which had brought with it a new misfortune. A light gleamed ahead, and the sound of a single jack hammering on the end of a drill could be heard. Fairchild called and went forward, to find Harry, grimy and sweating, pounding away at a narrow streak of black formation which centered in the top of the stope.

"It's the vein," he announced, after he had greeted Fairchild, "and it don't look like it's going to amount to much!"

"No?"

Harry withdrew the drill from the hole he was making and mopped his forehead.

"It ain't a world-beater," came disconsolately. "I doubt whether it'll run more'n twenty dollars to the ton, the way the smelting prices have gone up! And there ain't much money in that. What 'appened in Denver?"

"Another frame-up by the Rodaines to get the mine away from us. It was a lawyer. He stalled that the offer had been made to us by Miss Richmond."

"How much?"

"Two hundred thousand dollars and us to get out of all the trouble we are in."

"And you took it, of course?"

"I did not!"

"No?" Harry mopped his forehead again. "Well, maybe you're right. Maybe you're wrong. But whatever

"Harry, this vein doesn't look like much, but if you're game, I'm game."

Didn't Enjoy It.

Young Harry was home for a few days from a cruise with the merchant marine. "Well," said the man from the home town gently, "how have you been enjoying maritime life?"

"I haven't been enjoying it at all, sir," answered the youngster, blushing. "She broke the engagement."—Pioneer Enterprise.

Magnified Trifles.

Trifles that amount to little are too frequently magnified and those which really should receive attention are ignored. This is because too many men and women lack ability properly to estimate the value of things. Ability to appraise is a premium nowadays.

Figuring Ahead.

Margaret Ellen had been invited out to Sunday dinner. The meal was being served and the host, viewing the platter of chicken, decided a "drumstick" would be a suitable piece for the four-year-old Miss Margaret Ellen. He heroically attacked her portion and in due course of events calmly looked up and said: "Uncle, when I get through with this bone I think I would like some meat."

Embarrassing.

Willis—How do you like the combination furniture they have in some of these New York flats?

Gillie—Not at all. I went to bed in a piece of that kind of junk the other night at a friend's house and when I woke up, two women were serving breakfast on the foot-board, a fellow was signing checks on the head-board and another fellow was underneath the bed making coffee.—Life.

28. Milk makes fighters. Europe, in her turmoil of countless years ago, was always conquered by dairy-fed tribes. The weak races of the Far East and the South are examples of listless, easily conquered peoples who have never known the energy diet of the harder northern people.

29. Babies die like flies every year because ignorant mothers attempt to improve upon nature with milk substitutes. God made milk for babies.

30. Good cooks everywhere use milk instead of water in making their good dishes. Likewise they use butter instead of lard-like substitutes for the same reason. Nothing can compare with the milk taste.

Biliousness

WHEN you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. There is nothing better.
